A folate-binding protein (FBP) from E. coli has been isolated, and its polypeptide sequence and binding characteristics have been determined. The FBP is a cytoplasmic protein, and the amino acid sequence was deduced from the nucleotide sequence of a lambda-insert containing cDNA. The deduced amino acid sequence of this protein shows weak homology with protein families described as having structural and functional relationships to folate binding proteins, including the beta-subunit of the human folate receptor. Experiments conducted by demonstrating the interaction of this protein with folic acid (FA) showed that FBP binds FA with approximately 1/1000 of the affinity for 5-methyltetrahydrofolate, an ester of FA. The binding is specific since apo- and holo-substrates were employed. Binding to FBP also occurs in isolated lipopolysaccharide and requires the presence of the FBP, suggesting that binding may be a primary event in lipopolysaccharide interaction with bacterial membranes. evidence of such discrimination in the context of the employer's failure to hire him. 19 The plaintiff in Haines testified that he spoke with the manager of the store in the department where he had applied and was told he was not eligible for hire as the manager would have to be an assistant manager. The manager also told Haines that his chances of getting a job would be "very small". It is not clear if Haines was told this fact was because of his prior felony conviction. Haines did not apply for the management position nor was he shown the job descriptions for any position. In any event, the store manager did not testify. 20 In the context of this case, we do not believe that Haines' statement to
