Shenmue: I'm Not What I Seem Shenmue: I'm Not What I Seem is a Shenmue-inspired puzzle video game by iNiS. The game was released in Japan on November 22, 2011. A European version was released in Germany on June 1, 2012. Gameplay The game is played through the eyes of two detectives working on the case of a Japanese computer virus that has been creating super-human heroes in a peaceful city. According to iNiS, the game is not based on the game Shenmue. Reception The game received mediocre reception from critics and fans. Vultures Park called the game "bad" and compared it unfavorably to Shenmue. Gaming website Ultra Game Zone gave the game 2/5 stars, stating that while "there are a few interesting bits here and there, the actual experience is quite mediocre". Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a crank assembly. 2. Description of the Related Art A conventional crank assembly for an internal combustion engine is known (for example, see the Patent Literature 1). In the conventional crank assembly, a crankshaft is supported by a bearing mechanism provided on a crankcase, and the bearing mechanism is supported by a bearing part supported on a crankpin. The bearing part includes a taper bearing and a roller bearing. The Patent Literature 1: Japanese Patent Application Laid-open No. 2001-144050 The above-mentioned conventional crank assembly includes a taper bearing and a roller bearing. A two-piece or a three-piece structure may be adopted as the bearing mechanism of the crank assembly. However, when the bearing mechanism includes the taper bearing and the roller bearing, the taper bearing is inferior in rigidity and the roller bearing is inferior in durability. Events S.I.T.E.S. Medical Malpractice: The Case of Dr. Azcuna Share this: This was the situation in the case of State of Texas vs. Doctor Azcuna as reported by CBS. The case of Dr. Azcuna came about due to an injury that occurred while he was performing surgery on a patient. The patient informed Dr. Azcuna that he was having trouble breathing while under anesthesia during the procedure, and that the "relax" valve was not set to semi-open. Dr. Azcuna acted quickly by moving the patient's jaw forward manually to open the valve. The patient suffered from a traumatic brain injury, complications with the brain and a severe infection in the brain. Dr. Azcuna was sued because, after the procedure was completed, the patient's family sought help from a different anesthesiologist. The anesthesiologist told them about the valve and explained that it should be set to semi-open, not fully open. If it had been set to semi-open, Dr. Azcuna would not have been required to manually move the jaw forward. It was determined that Dr. Azcuna was not properly informed of the "relax" valve and should have been aware of the problems with that setting in the operating room. The patient's family filed a medical malpractice lawsuit against Dr. Azcuna, and it was settled. The need for strong malpractice insurance protection It is important to have insurance protection against potential claims in the hospital or medical practice environment. Being vigilant and prudent about the insurance protection needed will ensure you are able to continue providing your services to patients and treating them with the care and treatment 570a42141b
