The Comartins, who currently have some children enrolled in the Ottawa Children’s Aid Society’s Early Child Care Program, won their case in June when Ontario Superior Court Judge Kathryn Collard ruled it unfair for the provincial government to make the federal government pay for the children’s private daycare costs. In her decision, Collard ordered Ottawa’s child and family services agency to review the Comartins’ case, and to notify the court what recommendations were made in the review.Bonuses The maximum bonus is 4 GB of your data storage for free.
