The instructor can enroll a Windows computer as a primary time server to the multimedia computer, or the instructor can use the time-sharing features of the server that are installed on the multimedia computer, as shown in Figure 25-45. If the instructor uses a Windows computer as the primary time server to the multimedia computer, the instructor can provide Windows-based services on the Windows computer in addition to the Windows PC-based services. The instructor must not provide the Linux-based time-sharing services on the Windows computer. The Windows server computer must be located either on the instructor's physical computers network or accessible over the network. When the Windows server provides Windows-based services to the multimedia computer, the instructor can use a computer running Windows exhaust gas of an internal combustion engine, a honeycomb structure catalyst (hereinafter referred to as a honeycomb catalyst) whose channels are plugged with a catalyst carrying layer is known. Such a honeycomb catalyst is disclosed in the following Patent Documents 1 to 4. It is disclosed that a catalyst carrying layer is formed by applying a catalyst slurry to a honeycomb base material, and in the catalyst carrying layer, exhaust gas flow paths which communicate with channel ends on the periphery of the honeycomb catalyst are formed. For example, in the exhaust gas purification catalyst disclosed in the Patent Document 1, a catalyst carrying layer formed by plugging a plurality of cells of a honeycomb catalyst is used, and a portion of the catalyst carrying layer in each cell communicates with channels formed in the honeycomb catalyst at cell ends which are in the periphery of the honeycomb catalyst. Further, a catalyst carrying layer is formed by plugging some

A: find -name *.dmg find is better than grep on this kind of task. Make no mistake about it -- the heat is on for Wisconsin Gov. Scott Walker in an effort to oust him from office. He's survived a recall election before, but this time it's going to be tougher. Walker may have the biggest opponents on the ballot this time out, but he doesn't have the resources to go up against them -- including the money. The Government Accountability Board, which is responsible for overseeing the recall election, is warning Walker's campaign that unless the governor raises about $20 million, a lot of out-of-state money will be coming into the state to boost Democratic efforts. We've been hearing the rumors about the Wisconsin governor's possible resignation for some time now, but only now do we see evidence that it might actually be on the table. The talk wasn't so much about a late night negotiation, but rather a conversation between Sen. Ron Johnson and Gov. Scott Walker -- or more specifically, what Johnson said when he called Walker, according to The Milwaukee Journal Sentinel. Earlier in the day, Johnson had gone to the state Senate to brief his fellow Republicans on a proposal to overhaul the union rights law in Wisconsin and give workers a chance to vote to end their membership in a union. When Johnson hung up from Walker, the talk on the floor was so loud he had to yell to be heard. "I called him and said, 'I've been in your shoes and I don't see why, at this particular time, you're going to step off,'" Johnson said of Walker. "That was it. There was just a pause and then he started talking about other things." Even if the talk was mostly confined to one conversation, it's a reflection of how much momentum for changing Wisconsin's union rights law has been building. The Republican-controlled Legislature's last attempt to pass the measure was stymied in the courts, where a conservative majority on the Wisconsin Supreme Court said it went too far in restricting the rights of workers to bargain collectively. It has heretofore been proposed that so-called side-release or pull-tab closures be applied to beverage containers, and to be effective, such a closure must provide for the separation of the valve pull tabs by the ultimate user by pulling the tabs away from the top of the container, while still providing sufficient force to maintain the closure against blow-off prior to opening of
