I appreciated the new Windows 10 operating system's improved touch interface, which is a welcome change. We shouldn't be surprised by Apple offering Touch ID on its own devices, but I don't hesitate to use Windows 10. The Surface Pro included a fingerprint scanner on its cover, and I can't recommend it enough. By the way, I'd advise against buying Windows 10 from the Microsoft Store as it resulted in errors that resulted in system crashes. The biggest hurdles I encountered while I was using the HP Stream 11 (aka Chromebook Pixel e-reader) were on the software side. First, the OS requires Java or Microsoft Silverlight to function, and the programs are not available on the Web. Also, the operating system is unstable even with optional updates. I tried downloading the native Linux versions of Lightroom and Photoshop, but they didn't seem to work at all. That means users have to plan ahead and know that they don't have access to custom software. Out of this entire category of notebooks, Windows is the only one that can be upgraded. An interesting notion is that Adobe could adapt its Creative Suite 6 for Windows 8.1 in order to provide a Windows-like environment for software developers who do not want to build their own Windows desktop applications. Finally, so far, I found Lightroom's and Photoshop's interfaces very difficult to learn to use. Many menus are included that make more sense when you first delve into the software (File, Develop, Edit, History and many more).

Share for Review is a feature that works in tandem with the shared workspace feature introduced in Adobe Creative Cloud 2019 to allow a host of collaborators to easily work on side-by-side projects inside Photoshop. Users can share it with a variety of collaborators through a team workspace in Creative Cloud, including multiple employees at once. The most important recent change was the introduction of the new one-click features: From and Fill in a single action. Users can select a specific object in an image and hit a single button to remove it. They can also select the object to be replaced, and a button will be available to choose where the replacement object should be moved to. Users can also opt-in to instant upload to the cloud. The software will search for the best way to extend the quality of an image without loss of sharpness, for example, enlarging the image to fill projected area, and it will save the cropped image as a high-quality file (JPG or TIFF - Files) to a cloud service. A new One-Click Edge Enhance feature works in tandem with the previous Edge Lighting feature to support stylish lighting solutions for images. Together, edge lighting and one-click edge enhancements provide user-customizable lighting effects to create a wide variety of looks. Additionally, the feature will also correct perspective as needed. The software automatically recognizes when a pair of edges are parallel and suggests that users apply a lift-UV bump to produce the best results.
