I still remember that episode of The Simpsons where Homer is pursued by a giant... Anyway, I'm back with some posts. In mid-September, I went to see the exhibition New Formations, a sculptural work by Japanese artist and ceramist Yayoi Kusama. Kusama explores the relationships between creativity and social structure, the boundaries between art and life, the relationships between things, bodies and space, and the way that art represents our conception of art and art our conception of ourselves. At the time I went to see the exhibition, Kusama was still busy doing her Mirror Room installations, which involve her pink suspended orbs hanging from the ceiling. In the case of Mirror Room IV, the orbs are suspended from the ceiling in one of two adjoining rooms. The artwork depicts a desert scene on the far wall of the larger room. Some people have called the Cosmos series of artworks, designed as decorative patterns for wallpaper, the most powerful ever designed. The Cosmos series is a collection of over 2500 square feet of tapestries made by the Iranian artist Abbas Akhavan. The tapestries depict a variety of galactic phenomena from millions of miles away. The artist, inspired by Chinese astrological texts, uses astronomical phenomena to point to planetary relationships in our universe. The work is made in collaboration with the Iranian Astronomical Society. The exhibition concept, led by
